At the former port on March 16 it is said 250 tons of these fish were handled from boat to rail, medium sized selling at 19 shillings to 23 shillings per 120. The catch was later interrupted by unfavorable weather, but fish were still reported plentiful. At Penzance on March 26 catches ranged up to 10,000 per boat and prices ruled from 22 shillings to 25 shillings per 120 fish.

WILL BE PRESSED OUT.

Some of Coming Herring Cargoes Will Go for Oil.

A Few May Be Carried in Cold Storage.

What disposition will be made of the frozen herring cargoes now on the way home from Bay of Islands, N. F., is a matter of some conjecture.

There is at this time, when fresh bait is necessary and in fair receipt, no call for frozen herring for bait.

Some of the cargoes may be carried over in cold storage, but it is doubtful if any large amount will be put in the freezer as the expenses are considerable. Undoubtedly most of the fares will go to the oil dealers, who will cook them and press them for oil.

Should all the cargoes come along together, the oil firms could not handle the whole of them and it may be that some of the vessels will have to go outside the Point and dump their loads.

One fare, that of sch. Sceptre, has been sold to Frank Stanwood, who will press it out for oil. It is understood that the price is in the neighborhood of 25 cents per barrel.

Testing the Abundance of Fish.

During last summer the Norwegian government carried on a series of investigations on the north and west coasts of Finnmarken to test the abundance of fish. Dr. Knut Dahli, on board the fishing steamer Skolpen, chartered for the purpose, found fish, especially cod, very plentiful near Nordkyn, on the north coast, in June and July; in three hauls of the line 8000 large cod were taken. The whole coast from Nordkyn to Vardo was examined up to 20 miles from land, and everywhere the catches were rich. In a few weeks about 100,000 kilogrammes (nearly 2000 cwt.), mostly cod, were caught, and it is said that as this is the route taken by the migrating cod in Barents Sea, a very profitable fishery might be established with well-equipped vessels.

New Fishing Ground.

The North Sea Fishing Company of Geestemunde, England, has just been recently prospecting for new trawling grounds in the Atlantic off the Spanish coast and with success. After a voyage lasting 22 days the Madgeburg has brought back, for the third time, a catch of about 1000 cwt., which sold for close upon 12,000 marks, or 588 pounds, which is at the rate of approximately 196 pounds per week. On these new grounds hake, maigre, (Sciaena), bream, gurnards and sharks abound. In the winter season, when the Iceland fishing is not very successful, it is believed that the ground referred to will form a valuable substitute, and five steam trawlers have now been sent thither.
